

The Mutual Limited Funds include:

- Mutual Cash Fund (MCTDF)
- Mutual Income Fund
- Mutual Credit Fund
- Mutual High Yield Fund

The Funds are managed by Mutual Limited, an experienced Australian investment manager specialising in fixed income, and distributed by Copia Investment Partners, a fund distribution company.

While each Fund is managed by the same investment team and follows a similar philosophy, there are differences in their investment strategies, eligible investments, risk and return targets.

As a fixed income manager, Mutual Limited will predominantly invest in deposits, fixed income and credit securities.

What is fixed income?

The Australian fixed income asset class includes a vast array of securities with one simple attribute: they aim to pay a regular interest payment plus principal at maturity. If the securities are bought or sold before maturity, the price may vary from the maturity value, creating a capital gain or loss depending on market conditions.

Common types of fixed income securities include bonds, bank deposits, floating rate notes, mortgage-backed securities and asset backed securities. Bonds that are issued by governments are generally guaranteed, reducing their risk of default. Corporations and other institutions can also issue bonds, and as they are not government guaranteed, the risk of any default is based on the issuer's own level of creditworthiness. The non-government segment of the fixed income universe is defined as Credit, and there is a wide spectrum of issuers with different degrees of credit quality.

Why include cash and fixed income in a portfolio?

There are many reasons why an investor may want to include cash or fixed income in their portfolio.

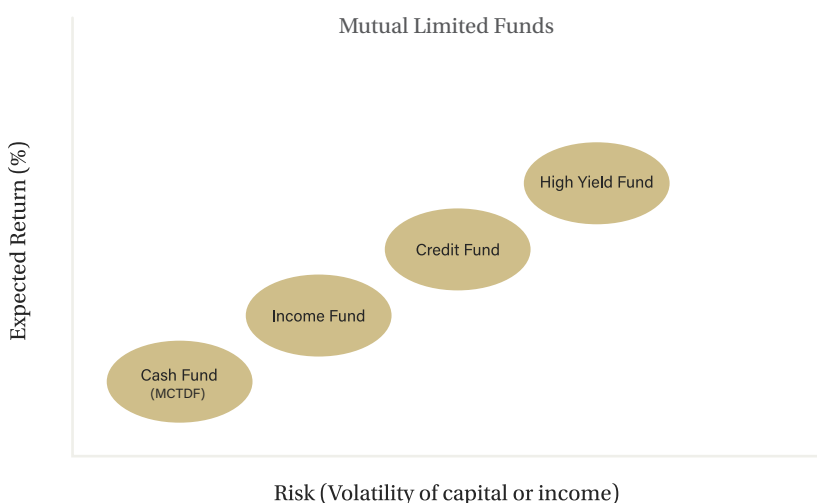

- A cash fund may be an ideal investment when saving for a home or expensive asset, due to the relative stability of capital.
- For retirees, a cash or short-term fixed income investment may be suitable as part of a portfolio to help preserve capital and provide liquidity to meet living expenses.
- For accumulation investors with a multi-sector strategy, cash and fixed income can help reduce the risk of the overall portfolio due to their low volatility and low correlations with other growth asset classes like equities.
- Equity investors may also use a cash fund to facilitate settlements.

How the investment process works

While the investment process includes many steps, there are four key elements that drive the process. Applying these elements consistently every day helps ensure that discipline and rigor are maintained with every investment decision.

1. Economic Research	2. Formal Committees
Macro-economic research sets the scene for the investment process. Economic developments in Australia and overseas (particularly inflation and interest rates) will typically influence the performance and risks of fixed income securities	The Investment Committee is responsible for setting the broad parameters for the investment team and draws on economic research. The Committee sets a score for key variables including market direction, pricing and sentiment.
3. Credit Research	4. Portfolio Construction
Corporate issuers are assessed by credit analysts who consider a broad set of factors to determine creditworthiness, including underlying business model, asset quality, capital adequacy, liquidity & funding profile, profitability and ESG.	Portfolio positioning is driven by the decisions from the Investment Committee and investment team meetings. Portfolios are managed to maximise performance within established parameters and risk limits, including credit, interest rate and sector exposures.

The chart below is a general illustration of how each Fund compares in terms of performance objective and risk.

“Our purpose as a defensive asset manager is to offer investors a safe and predictable outcome, to provide regular income and stability in capital.”
